Theme of the story

- The lesson shows three things. stop
- It shows Lencho's firm faith in God. believe
- His faith is rewarded through the helpers are human beings. simple
- Secondly, it shows the utter innocence of the farmer, Lencho. naive
- Thirdly, the lesson gives a message that sometimes even your generosity is not recognised. selflessness
- You may not get any credit for your generosity and kindness. dishonest
- But on the other hand, you may be misunderstood as a 'bunch of crooks'.

Message of the story

- The story teaches us that if a man has unwavering faith in God he can achieve anything considered insurmountable. strong
- If with true faith one asks God for help, God responds, through his own ways and help man's any legitimate desire. big humane
- In this story, God came to help Lencho through the Postmaster. doable
- There is God in every one of us, God exists through the good deeds we do.

Postmaster - Character Sketch

- kind and generous big hearted
- Displays open-heartedness help
- Resolves to keep Lencho's faith in God intact decides

Opposite Irony of the story ★

- The Postmaster and the people of the post office were the ones who had taken the initiative to bring together the money to meet Lencho's request for which he had written a letter to God, but in the end lencho thinks that the people in the post office has taken some money from the amount he received. This was the irony in the story.

Significance of the title 'A Letter to God'

- 'A letter to God' is a story of extreme faith in god.
- The story is all about how a poor farmer wrote to God asking for money and a postmaster helped him instead.
- When the farmer found that the money was less than he had asked for, he wrote to God again, asking for more but not to send it via post because they were thieves.
- The title is justified because it is all about faith and how God works in strange ways.
- There is also a slight irony in the fact that a human helped out but the faith was so strong that the farmer continued to believe that it was God.

Answer

believe

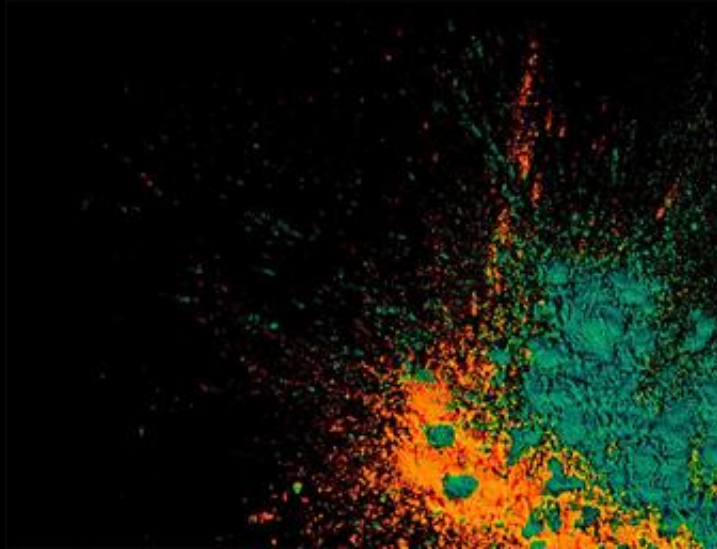

- Writing a letter to God and addressing it 'To God' shows the writer's unshaken faith in God.
- He was a simple man not distrusting that such a letter could reach God. Kindness
- His innocence and firm belief in God's mercy even deeply impressed and influenced the postmaster who decided to answer his letter.
- He didn't want to shake the writer's faith in God.
- He collected and sent 70 pesos as help signing the letter with one word, 'God'.
- Lencho had so much faith in God and His mercy that he didn't show any surprise when he received the money sent to him.
- He wrote another letter requesting Him to send the rest of the money immediately but not through the postal mail as the post office employees was a 'bunch of crooks'.
